

A Marine Corps DH-4, one of the combat planes that served as the eyes of the artillery and infantry forces during the First World War.

Officers on horseback lead a Marine brigade through the French countryside.

A wounded marine is placed on a stretcher in one of the hundreds of trenches dug by American fighting forces in Europe.

Men of the 4th Marine Brigade crouch behind trees during the fierce fighting at Belleau Wood.

2nd Division marines advance through the Blanc Mont sector. The heavily fortified hill was taken in just three days.

WORLD WAR I

In a French village a Marine column halts for a rest on the way to the front.

